There is sometimes a conflict between what parents believe is best for their children and what they should be doing to be on top of the success ladder in the 21st Century. Scholastics are important but that doesn't make performing arts any less important. Recreational arts like music, dance, drama are a powerful part of our personal life and yet when we go to work or school we turn it off.

Performing Arts are all about self-expression, exploring alternative options and embracing individuality. It's not black and white, or about right or wrong answers, and this allows children to develop self-confidence and belief in themselves. With improved self-confidence and self-belief, comes a natural pathway for children to go on to master many more skills that will equip them for life.

When we see our kids go on to international platforms and win accolades, the satisfaction received is unmatched.
